Peruvian Syrup.—This valuable medicine has been lately making its way into public favor by the numerous remarkable cures it has performed. Its singular efficacy is owing to the protoside of iron which in this preparation remains unchanged, and is the only form in which this vital element of healthy blood can be supplied.

The wild goose does—regard Dr. Ayer's wisdom in migrating north—such innumerable numbers of them are flying over us now, while his almanac says: "Bleak and blustering about this time, with heavy snow."—(Cedar Rapids Times), March 3.

We were too fast last week in our item on the conflict between Dr. Ayer and the wild goose. The Doctor's science had their instinct this time. Not for years have we had such a vast storm as that of last Sunday. The science, three feet deep on a level in Minnesota and two feet in Wisconsin, while the storm has swept from the Atlantic to the Rocky Mountains. Snow fell in various depths as far south as Denver, Fort Union and Santa Fe. Learned as we believed Dr. Ayer in the arena of nature, and wonderful as we knew his medicines to be, we were not prepared for so signal an instance of his superiority, not only over the wise men, but the worst of fools, whose instinct is considered infallible. We drive up the peg, more firmly than ever, over our hearth for Ayer's American Almanac.—(Cedar Rapids Times), March 16.

The Quack Settled.—Those eminent men, Dr. J. S. Clark, Physician to Queen Victoria, and Dr. Hughes Bennett, say that consumption can be cured. Dr. Wistie knew this when he discovered his new and wonderful Bismuth of Wild Cherry, and experience has proved the correctness of his opinion.

Extemporaneous Efforts.

Marshall, of Kentucky, one of the most brilliant orators of his time, and a man of large scholarly attainments, who had as much of that mystical quality called genius as any of his contemporaries in Congress, was full of affection in this regard. He spoke readily without preparation, his ideas following each other consecutively and with uncommon force; but he never trusted to the inspiration of the moment when there was opportunity for studying up the subject and arranging his thoughts in advance. He had a habit of absenting himself from the Capitol for days at a time, every hour of which he devoted to reading and study, his acquaintances generally supposing him to be engaged in a debauch. After getting thoroughly crumpled and armed at every point he would come into the House looking exhausted and haggard, giving color to the notion that he had been on a frolic, and watching his opportunity, would pour forth the fruits of study in a strain of off-hand, striking eloquence that hardly ever failed to astonish his hearers. And the remark was often heard, "What a brilliant man! What could he not accomplish if he was industrious and regular in his habits!"

Mr. Preston, for some time Mr. Calhoun's colleague in the Senate, was an accomplished gentleman and a very popular orator. He never spoke without commanding the attention of his hearers, and few men in Congress had a higher reputation for brilliant extemporaneous eloquence. But he never spoke without the most ample and careful preparation. Soon after he retired from Congress he was chosen president of a college in South Carolina. In an address to the students, he said he knew of no such thing as genius or natural inspiration. Whatever of reputation he had acquired was by dint of constant, untiring labor. He had trusted to study and hard work solely. He never spoke in Congress or to a popular assembly without arranging what he had to say, and even premeditating his sentences and the precise collocation of his words. And he assured his hearers that the only road to public distinction lay through the field of study and research.

Mr. Webster was so thoroughly instructed upon all subjects which came under discussion in Congress that he was equal to almost any occasion, and rarely needed any special preparation. And yet he was not above the weakness of concealing his studies, and the source whence he drew his inspiration. No man better understood the weight and value of language than Mr. Webster, and what he said was always marked by precision and perspicuity; but when coping with a formidable antagonist he omitted no means that promised to aid him in the contest. He was accustomed to speak of the master production of his life, his celebrated reply to Hayne, as a sort of casual effort, made on the spur of the moment, without much previous consideration.

Probably the two men in public life who could most safely trust to their own resources and acquisitions, under all circumstances, were Mr. Adams and Mr. Calhoun. The endeavors of Mr. Calhoun were of a higher order, and his creative power was superior to that of Mr. Adams; but the "old man eloquent," as he was called, had a memory so tenacious, and his knowledge was so extensive and exact, that he never seemed to need any special preparation. He was the most laborious and methodical man in Congress, and probably in the country. He kept a voluminous diary, in which every event, incident or circumstance of the day was carefully noted down; and this, with his habits of industry, made him a very doctor in all matters of controversy and argument. It was a knowledge of his complete equipment and his power as an antagonist that prompted the reply of Mr. Clay, when asked when he proposed to renew the discussion with Mr. Adams on the vexed question of the fugitives from the Mississippi, as connected with the treaty of Ghent. Finding himself getting the worst of the argument, Mr. Clay closed the consideration of the matter, so far as he was concerned, with the remark that he should drop the subject, hoping to renew it at some future period more favorable for calm discussion, when he expected to show that Mr. Adams was altogether in the wrong. Some time afterward a friend asked him when he proposed to reopen the controversy. "Never!" was the emphatic reply. "A man must be a born fool who voluntarily engages in a controversy with Mr. Adams on a question of fact. I doubt whether he was ever mistaken in his life. And then, if he happens to be in doubt about any thing, he has his inevitable diary, in which he has everything that has occurred since the adoption of the Federal Constitution."—From "Recollections of an Old Stager," in Harper's Magazine for July.

An unfortunate culprit was recently brought before an Iowa Justice charged with assaulting and battering a maiden. Investigation showed that the defendant had merely saluted the damsel against her will. She was in court, and gave her testimony looking so very beautifully that the Judge was compelled to make a special ruling. He could not, he said, fine the man for doing what was done; for, said His Honor, "I have been obliged to hold on to the arms of my chair to keep from kissing the complainant myself." Never did a Judge give a more rational decision.

A Peoria girl, on her marriage, sold her piano and bought a sewing-machine, and materials enough to make full suits for her husband and herself, and straightway went to work making them up. Her sisters are already all married.

A woman in Burlington, Ia., several years ago, while attending the funeral of her first husband, heard that her house had burned down. Recently her second husband died, and while absent at his funeral, her house was again burned.

If you don't hurry, always hurry for your own good.
